

MEETING ENDORSES ONE CENTRAL SCHOOL

Comprehensive Discussion of the Bond Issue Followed by Almost Unanimous Vote

Almost unanimous endorsement was given to the plan of the Richmond School Board to erect a magnificent central school building on the eight-acre site of the present Madison High School at a largely attended mass meeting of citizens at the court house Monday night.

Following a frank presentation of the plans as formulated by the School Board by Chairman John Noland, and after considerable discussion pro and con, Mr. T. S. Burnam declared that he was convinced that the plans of the board were for the best interests of the people as a whole and should be endorsed.

Mrs. Warfield C. Bennett then moved that the board's plan for the building of a central school on the Madison High property be endorsed as the sense of the meeting. There were several seconds to her motion, and upon a rising vote called for by Chairman Dr. R. L. Telford, all but three or four arose and gave their endorsement to the board's plans.

Many who went to the meeting opposed to the removal of the school from the Caldwell school site, left convinced that they were in error and that the best thing for the interests of the school children of the present and the future would be to construct one great building on the other site.

Chairman John Noland, of the School Board, called the meeting to order, and clearly and frankly told of the work that the School Board found ahead of it. He stated what had been done in every particular, told of the various opinions and plans that had been considered and of the decision finally arrived at: if the voters of Richmond authorize on June 17th the bond issue of $80,000, to erect a modern, complete, and magnificent school on the Madison High site. Mr. Noland went into detail, and then asked the people to co-operate with the Board by appointment of a Citizens' Committee.

Dr. Telford was then named as chairman of the meeting and the committee. Attorney A. R. Burnam, who is looking after legal matters in connection with the proposed bond issue, explained the conditions of the lease of the old Madison institute property, and in answer to inquiries read the deed to the Caldwell property. He gave it as his legal opinion that the chances were almost all in favor of the school board being able under the law, to dispose of the Caldwell site as it saw fit, in the early days of the school situation here all of the terms of the old grant had been fully complied with.

Hon. W. B. Smith, Richmond's oldest attorney, espoused the idea of erecting a splendid central school building on the Madison High site, with characteristic vigor. He said that perhaps he was the only one present who had ever seen Robert Caldwell, who gave the Caldwell site to the city. He told of his early days at school there and gave some interesting reminiscences of early days. He urged the people to vote to erect a building that Richmond would not be ashamed of. He said he felt sure most of the mothers of the city would vote for the tax to provide their children with comfortable school quarters. He declared that the one acre of ground at Caldwell was inadequate to care for the growing school population. He said that undoubtedly 500 boys and girls would crowd Caldwell beyond the limits of safety. He declared his opinion that Richmond will never make a manufacturing center, so thought the people should have an ambition to make it a great educational center.

In response to a query from Miss Belle H. Bennett, Mr. J. A. Kunkel, attendance officer, stated that the school census of Richmond shows 923 children of school age. There are about 550 in the graded department and 125 in the high school.

Mr. Waller Bennett wanted to know from experienced school men whether it is best to have all sizes and classes of children together in one big school. He asserted that this school matter is not a question of so much money or location but of education; and that the people should decide on what is best for the real educational good to their children.

In response to this, City Supt. J. Howard Payne told of the opinion of Dr. Strayer, head of the School Administration of Columbia University, that one central school building is far better than scattered schools in any city under 15,000 or 10,000. He told of the enthusiastic work that can be done by eliminating lines of demarcation between the grades and high school. With the eight acres available at Madison High, he said, it would not be necessary to have the same playgrounds for the children of different sizes and different grades that it was proposed even to have separate lavatories or different floors, etc.

What Supt. Payne said thoroughly corroborated by President T. J. Coates of Eastern Normal School who was present in the audience and was called upon for his opinion in the matter.

Mr. Erskine objected to the one building in a few remarks, saying that Richmond could expand either way, and there ought to be a school on each side.

Mr. T. S. Burnam then declared that Mr. Noand's statement in regard to the board's plans was conclusive; and that there was nothing else to be done.

Mr. C. C. Wallace moved the appointment of an executive committee to crystallize sentiment in favor of the bond issue and to form an organization on the day of election to carry it.

Mr. Waller Bennett discussed the advisability of paying the cost of the new building by direct taxation instead of a long time bond issue. He said he would favor the bond issue if it was for three or four years or five years rather than spread over 20 years. To this Attorney A. R. Burnam replied that the only way this could be done under the financial condition of the city and legal restrictions on borrowing money, would be to raise the tax rate and thus secure about $25,000 a year, and build a new school piecemeal.

Mr. Bennett also said he and many others of the older citizens had much sentiment for the buildings of old Madison Institute and would hate to see the old buildings torn down.

Col. N. B. Deatherage said he too, would hate to see the old buildings go. He said he hated to see his old church torn down and hated to see the Presbyterians tear theirs down but pointed to the magnificent houses of worship which adorn the sites of the old ones. He declared that when school was going on at Caldwell, most of the children seemed to him to be out in the street; that one acre for a playground for 500 children was entirely too small and he was heartily in favor of one central building on the hill.

Dr. Homer W. Carpenter gave his approval to the sentiments which were being expressed. He urged that too much publicity could not be given to the plans and purposes of the board and the campaign committee. He also suggested that the colored people be fully acquainted with the needs and purposes of the school situation in Richmond.

Dr. Telford was empowered to name an executive committee to have charge of a campaign to carry the bonds and co-operate with the school board. This committee will be named within a day or so.

Mrs. Warfield Bennett's motion for complete endorsement of the board's plan then carried with a whoop and the meeting adjourned.

MAYS STARTS SUIT FOR TAX MILLIONS

Local Revenue Agent for State at Large Has Two Big Actions on Hands

Two of the biggest suits for collection of back taxes that have been brought in Kentucky in a number of years, are in the hands of W. O. Mays, of this city, revenue agent for the state-at-large, and will be prosecuted this week, according to Mr. Mays who spent Sunday at his home here.

One of the actions has been pending in the Jefferson county court for the past three years. It will be brought up before Judge Krieger on Thursday of this week, Mr. Mays says. This suit is to compel 67 railroads of the United States to pay back taxes on rolling stock that they own and which was on Kentucky tracks as of July 1, assessment date. This action has been pending a long time, while data was being collected and opinions of courts in other states and the Supreme Court consulted.

Mr. Mays says that the Pullman Company pays its rolling stock tax to the state of Kentucky regularly. He says that in many other states railroads pay this tax and the right of the state to assess for taxation on such grounds has been repeatedly upheld. He is very confident of winning this suit. Basis for taxation is arrived at, he points out, by striking an average of each railroad for given dates throughout the year. The amount in this case runs into the millions, and if held collectible in Kentucky now, will cover the period of the past eight years, as the state is empowered to collect back taxes on property for a period of five years behind the date an action is filed and this action has been on the court docket awaiting a hearing for three years. Mr. Mays points out that the rolling stock of a railroad is strictly tangible property, and has been so held by all the courts in which similar cases have come up, and therefore he expects to have the Kentucky courts declare all that is on tracks in Kentucky as of July 1st each year subject to taxation under the Kentucky laws.

Another Bingham Tax Suit
Another suit which Mr. Mays believes will yield the state treasury something like a million dollars in back taxes, is under preparation by his attorneys, and will be filed in court as quickly as possible, he says. This is an action to collect back taxes on the undivided portion of the estate of the late Mrs. Lily Flagler Bingham, of Louisville, for the past three years. Mr. Mays expects to have about $67,000,000 of her estate declared subject to payment of taxes in Kentucky by this action. He says that when demand was made by the Assessor of the city of Louisville for filing of lists of property for local taxation at the last assessment date, the Louisville trust company which was administrator of the estate, notified the assessor that the property had been distributed among the heirs, and that it held nothing now taxable in Kentucky. Later it was ascertained, Mr. Mays says, that there were a number of debts of the estate, including inheritance taxes and other such items unpaid. Going to the Kentucky statutes, Mr. Mays says, it will be found that a law provides that no estate can be distributed except pro rata with payment of the debts against it. Therefore, he and his attorneys are estimating that only about 25 per cent of the estate should have been distributed and that the balance which would be the proper proportion under the law, according to settlement of obligations against the estate, is still subject to state taxes.

It is understood that this action will involve a new point in Kentucky legal decisions and the course of action which will be brought by the state tax authorities through Revenue Agent Mays and his attorneys will undoubtedly be watched with interest.

The Decoration Day game was played Monday between the First and Second Christian teams of the Church League, before the largest crowd to date. The number far surpassed any seen at any game so far this season. The game proved to be a slugging match which resulted in a 18 to 13 victory for the First Christians. The Second church gained a big lead in the early innings but not being able to maintain it were overtaken and dragged out of first place. This game leaves these two teams tied for first place in the League.

Harold Oldham's hitting was a big feature of the game. He pounded out a single, two double and a triple in six times up. A faster man would have probably stretched one of these hits into a home run for the three extra base smashes went far into third distance. At that Oldham scored two runs himself beside driving in six more.

Lilly also drove out a triple and a double in three times up. Creel led the Second Christians in hitting with four bingles in five times at bat. Yader also connected safely with the horsehide four times but in six tries.

Millard made to fine running catches off C. Rogers and Yader. The Second Christian fielder held down their positions exceptionally well. R. Peyton and Lackey went thru the crowd to make pretty catches of foul flies. Lackey also made a fine stop of Chase's boulder over third in the eighth only to throw wild.

The former League leaders made two runs in their half of the first through a single by Yader, a lordly triple by Fanning, and a double by Chase, after two were out. The First Christian boys tied in their half of the first on three singles by Millard, H. Oldham and Doty.

Bob Maupin began to smile when his team added three more runs to their column through singles by R. Peyton, C. Rogers, D. Peyton and Yader, while their opponents went hitless in the second. Neither team scored in the third, but in the fourth, the Second Christians shoved another run across through singles by Fanning and Yader and two errors. The First Christians also scored on an error, a single by Neff and a double by Jennings.

In the first of the fifth Douglas replaced H. Oldham and was greeted by hits made by D. Peyton, Yader, Crech and C. Rogers which combined with two errors gave the Second Christians four runs. In the last of the fifth, single by Barnett, a base on balls and a double by H. Oldham netted two more runs for the First Christians. A base on balls and two hits by Chase and Creel yielded two more runs for the Second Christians. A nice catch by Millard cut off another run. Christians brought up their big guns and combined three singles by Lackey, Barnett, and Doty, a triple by H. Oldham and two errors for five runs.

Douglas let his opponents down without a hit in the seventh while Lilly slapped one for a triple, Douglas was hit by Isaacs. Lackey received a base on balls. Millard tapped one for a single. This netted three more runs. A hit by Crech, an error and three stolen bases, gave the Second church their last run. The First Christians opened fire again in the eighth and slapped the ball six times for hits which again gave five runs. Douglas got the first man in the ninth on an easy chance, struck out the next, and let Millard make his second fine running catch off Yader's bat. So it is, and the two Camp-

BOY, WHO MARRIED HERE, A CANDIDATE

Stewart Y. Carson

Stewart Y. Carson, of Stanford spent Sunday with his wife who is visiting relatives here. Mr. Carson is a candidate for the democratic nomination for County Clerk of Lincoln, and his many friends here are hoping that he gallops in a winner when the primary date rolls around. He is one of the most popular young men and democrats in Lincoln county; comes of a family which has fought his party's battles for many years and is qualified in every way to make a first class and efficient official. He says he is making a thorough canvass of the voters and is leaving no stone unturned to win his race. Mr. Carson, it will be recalled, married Miss Johnnie Azbill of this city. The Stanford Journal printed the above picture of him the other day when he formally announced and what is said of him will be of interest to his friends and relatives here. It had this:

The above picture is that of a well known young man and democrat who this issue announces for the democratic nomination for County Clerk of Lincoln, subject to the action of the primary of August 6. Mr. Carson was born at Crab Orchard 27 years ago and came with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carson, to Stanford a dozen years or so since. He attended school here and as soon as he was big enough to work, went at it and has stuck to it. For a long time he was manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company office here, a more important than good-paying position. He is married, his wife being before her marriage Miss Johnnie Azbill of Richmond. They have an attractive little daughter, Sara Yantis Carson. Mr. Carson will make a thorough canvass of the county and will leave no stone unturned in his effort to land the nomination. He has been an active young democrat since he was old enough to know right from wrong and has never failed to take a lively interest in all the races. He has pledges from many sections of the county and will, we are confident, get a big vote.

TRIBUTE PAID TO LOST CAUSE HEROES

Simple Service at Graves of Confederate Dead on Decoration Day

On Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the usual beautiful and impressive ceremony of decorating the graves of the Confederate soldiers was observed in the Richmond cemetery.

A few of the surviving soldiers of the Lost Cause now residing in Madison county gathered around the graves of their beloved dead and with beautiful floral and spoken tribute gave expression to their respect for devotion to and their love for their dead comrades.

Col. N. B. Deatherage and Dr. C. D. Pattie were in charge of the ceremonies. Col. Deatherage read a list of the names of the Confederate soldiers now living and residing in Madison county, and pointed out the fact that there were only thirteen now living in the county; that eight of the thirteen enlisted in the army in this county and are natives and citizens of the county; that five of these thirteen enlisted in the army from other places in Kentucky and have taken up their residence here since the war. residence here since the close of the war.

At the conclusion of the remarks made by Col. Deatherage, Rev. R. L. Telford, of the Presbyterian church, delivered an eloquent and beautiful address in which he stated the underlying principles for which the Confederate soldier fought. With earnest fervor and just pride he stated that he enjoyed a rich heritage in being the son of a Confederate soldier. His address was enjoyed and appreciated by the older soldiers present and by their many relatives and friends who gathered around to give fitting expression to the community's love for the old Confederate soldiers and their dead comrades.

Dr. Sadler, of the Methodist church, was then introduced and put himself immediately in touch with the spirit of the occasion by stating that his father fought through the war as a Confederate soldier as a member of the Mississippi regiment, that he lost both of his feet on the battlefield and that he came home and took up the battle of life as a civilian with the same courage and fortitude that always characterizes the Confederate soldier everywhere; that he succeeded in rearing and educating six children and living to a ripe old age. Dr. Sadler gave to his audience many interesting historical facts about the war that are not written in the ordinary textbook of history nor in the average history that is accessible to the public. He pointed out certain sources of information in the Congressional Library at Washington, where the statements he had made could be properly verified. Dr. Sadler's address was an old-fashioned southern speech stamped all the way through with genuine spirit of a true southerner and a proud son of a Confederate soldier.

The services were well attended and the program was carried out in a manner that was highly pleasing to the old soldiers present and to their relatives, loved ones and friends.
